

The rules of the Elias Tillandz prize

1. The Prize will be handed out every year at the context of the BioCity Symposium
2. The Prize is at least 2000 Euros but not more than 14 000 euros. The award is directed to the research group instead of being a personal grant.
3. The Prize will be given to one or more peer-reviewed scientific publications focused on life sciences, molecular medicine or some closely related field of science.
4. The research described in the publication must be originally performed to large extent in Turku area. The first and the last author should work in the University of Turku, the Åbo Akademi University or in some other research institute in Turku.
5. The proposals are requested from the Turku research community during the beginning of the year. The proposed papers should have been published during the previous year based on either the cover date of the issue or the electronic publication date.

The best publication prize of BioCity Turku is named after Professor Elias Tillandz (1640–1693) who brought empirical life sciences to Turku and was the first to publish an academic publication in Turku in 1673. The prize is supported by Åbo Akademi University Foundation.
